

Investment idea:

"Technology giant Microsoft is getting ready to storm new highs!
Let's make money on it!"

Microsoft (#MSFT) – is the largest multinational company, one of the most well-known software companies for computers, consoles and various mobile devices in the world. Microsoft is the developer of the world's most popular operating system — Windows and the most popular office software — Microsoft Office.

Microsoft products are sold in more than 80 countries around the world, programs have been translated into more than 45 languages. The capitalization of Microsoft in January 2017 exceeds $ 500 billion.

Microsoft shares are traded on the NASDAQ. Microsoft was founded in April 4, 1975.

Reasons to buy Microsoft shares in September:

- 1. Weakening in the trade tension. Despite the fact that since September 1, the United States and China have introduced new trade tariffs, the tension in the trade confrontation of these countries has significantly decreased. This is due to the trade talks and the cancellation of a number of duties by the United States.

It is also worth to note a certain easing of tension in the high-tech sector. This allows you to feel more confident in technology giants like Microsoft.

- 2. Positive reporting. Microsoft continues to demonstrate growth in earnings steadily and markedly increased payouts per share. This allowed to attract more new investments.

3. Technical factors. Technically, Microsoft shares were traded in flat all August, forming an ascending wedge. What can be regarded as a rollback of the downward divergence of June and July; and a technical signal for the resumption of growth.

The trading pressure remains to be a risk factor, which may resume pressure on the stock market. But, given the actions already taken in the trade war and the negotiations between the United States and China, these exacerbations are highly unlikely, which may lead to optimism in the market.
